Hon'ble Vice Chancellor's Message

Producing agricultural food of sufficient quantity and quality is essential for the well-being of the people anywhere in the world. Agricultural plants, as living organisms, require water and nutrients in order to grow and are sensitive to extreme weather phenomena, diseases and pests. The crucial management of natural resources is the need for human survival and sustainable development of agriculture. Geo-informatics is a multidiscipline concerned with the modeling of spatial data and the processing techniques in spatial information system. It is a multidisciplinary science that integrates the technologies and principles of digital cartography, remote sensing, photogrammetry, surveying, global positioning systems, geographic information system (GPS), geographic information system (GIS) and automated data captured systems using high resolution geo-referenced spatial information from aerospace remote sensing platforms. The remote sensing and GIS has numerous applications in Agriculture and allied sectors. India has launched PSLV-C40/Cartosat-2 Series Satellite on Jan 12, 2018 from Sriharikota. The Indian National Satellite (INSAT) systems which are placed in Geo-stationary orbits are one of the largest domestic communication satellite systems in Asia-Pacific region.
